

TODD HORTON

Statement

This new series “the Mystic West” is from my time during the pandemic of going out into the vast open sky spaces of the west, exploring and making art from a sense of place, surrounded by loneliness and living questions. Art is only interesting and meaningful by living those questions... Vitally necessary to the human experience, ultimately to guide toward beauty’s ends and poetic beginnings.

...and what is art and how is it recognized? Like the sound of moonlight falling across the open range...

Bio

Todd Horton lives and paints full time between his floating studio on the Samish River and his forest studio at the foot of misty Blanchard Mountain. Creating work from a sense of place through the secret of making.
