APRIL 17, 24, MAY 1 & 8, 2019

The Schack Art Center is offering the twentieth annual Art Technique Workshop Series for credit or clock hours. This course consists of 4 Wednesday evening sessions taught by local educator Mari Atkinson. Visual art interdisciplinary teaching enables students to become creative, confident problem-solvers and makers. In this workshop participants will learn how to facilitate the design thinking process by using their own curriculum to frame their lessons, make connections to other content areas, and acquire techniques for guiding students toward developing the necessary mindset and skills to thrive in today's world. Topics include Discovery and Ideation, Refining Ideas and Working with Constraints, Experimentation and Prototypes, and Presentations as a grand finale. Series offered for SPU credit/clock hours or Everett SD clock hours.

Workshop Objectives:

- Participants will create connections between visual art and their grade level curriculum, by using design thinking to drive the development of students' critical and imaginative thinking.
- Participants will understand how to prepare students for future careers that may not yet exist today, by acquiring ideas for teaching empathy and adaptability.
- Participants will learn how to adapt their curriculum to provide innovative activities that include the design process: (1) Determine a problem to be solved (2) Brainstorm (3) Prototype (4) Share and Gather Feedback.
- Participants will understand how to design activities that will impact their students in the long run, by learning to adapt ideas and see things from another person's perspective.
- Participants will be able to identify possible problems and reframe them as actionable opportunities for their students.
- Participants will learn how to present Design Thinking to their students by sharing that many engineers use the steps of the design process to help find good design solutions to problems.
